

Instructor: Date:

Learner: Regional Branch:

Program: Center:

CONTENT

- Let's Start! • Let's Explore! • Let's Practice! • Extension Activity • Target Words • Learning Points

Let's Start!

Locked away.

Learning Outcome

Identify and describe rules and obligations through a wider range of language and expressions in both work and social contexts.

Ask your partner:

- Do you think prison is an effective method or punishment? Why or why not?
- If you could create a new method or punishment for criminals, what would it be? Why?

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about rules, regulations, crime and punishment.
- I can talk about what is supposed to happen.
- I can talk about things I had done or things that had happened.

Let's Explore!

Let's read about the history of the prison system. What were the two models of the American prison system?

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

Locked Away

When people are convicted of a crime, they are often sent to prison. That has not always been the case. Until the 1600s, most serious criminals had been executed by hanging or exiled from their homes to faraway islands. Petty offenders and poor people who had debts they could not repay had been sentenced to workhouses. In these "open" prisons, they had to perform hard labor, usually for the rest of their lives.

In the 17th century, some European countries began imprisoning debtors and other kinds of criminals. These prisons were very primitive and all of the prisoners were supposed to be mixed together – men, women, children, the sane, and the insane – all in a single large building.

In the US, the first laws demanding clean, reasonably humane prisons were passed in 1789. There were two different models for the American prison system. The first was the Auburn State Prison in New York, where prisoners worked together in total silence during the day but had to be locked in their own cells at night.

The second was the Cherry Hill Prison in Pennsylvania, where prisoners were supposed to be kept in solitary confinement day and night. Eventually, most states adopted the Auburn State model, so the cost of their imprisonment could be repaid. This system was changed again in 1870 in order to improve prison life and make it more humane.

Let's Practice!

Let's add some more words to talk about crime!

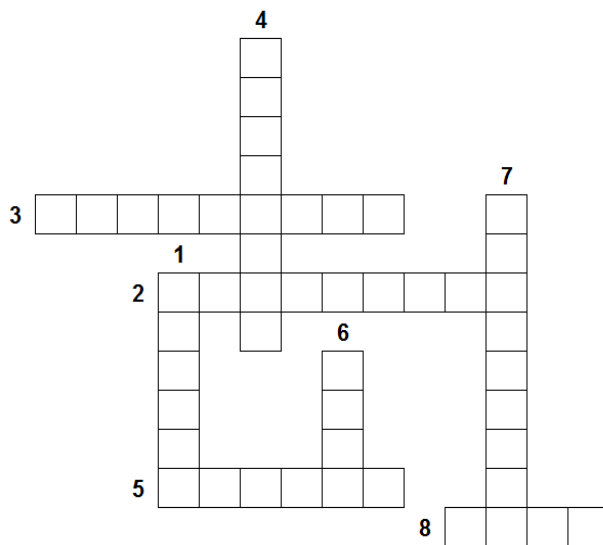

Instructions: Complete the crossword by reading the clues below for each direction (down, across).

Down

1. Someone who is h____e has or shows compassion.
4. S_____y confinement is a form of imprisonment in which an inmate is isolated from any human contact.
6. Someone who is s__e is not mentally ill.
7. A w_____e is a prison in which offenders are expected to work.

Across

2. H____r means heavy manual work as punishment.
3. P_____e means not developed.
5. To be e____d means to be permanently sent out of your country as punishment.
8. A c_l is a small room in which a prisoner is locked up

Let's Practice!

Prisons are serious punishment! Sarah talks about what prisons used to be like.

Instructions: Fill in the blanks with the corresponding sentence from the box.

Word Bank

there had been two different models / had had to perform hard labor / had imprisoned / serious criminals had been executed / had been sentenced to workhouses

1. Until the 1600s, most _____ by hanging or exiled from their homes to faraway islands.
2. Petty offenders and poor people who had debts they could not repay _____.
3. In these "open" prisons, they _____, usually for the rest of their lives.
4. Some European countries _____ debtors and other kinds of criminals.
5. Before 1789, _____ for the American prison system.

Extension Activity

Decide on the appropriate punishment.

Instructions: Complete the following steps. Fill in the Self-Assessment.

- With a partner, brainstorm a list of minor crimes. Write down your ideas.
- On your own, choose one crime and think of an appropriate but humane punishment for someone who commits this crime.
- In a group, present your ideas for a punishment and be prepared to defend your choice.
- Listen to your group's ideas and ask them to defend their ideas.

Target Words

- humane (adjective): having or showing compassion e.g. The first laws demanding clean, reasonably humane prisons were passed in 1789.
- primitive (adjective): not developed e.g. These prisons were very primitive.
- hanging (noun): capital punishment by tying a rope around the neck and suddenly dropping someone e.g. Most serious criminals had been executed by hanging.
- to be exiled (verb): to be permanently sent out of your country as punishment
e.g. Most serious criminals had been exiled from their homes to faraway islands.
- workhouse (noun): a prison in which offenders are expected to work e.g. Petty offenders and poor people who had debts they could not repay had been sentenced to workhouses.
- hard labor (noun): heavy manual work as punishment
e.g. In these "open" prisons, they had to perform hard labor, usually for the rest of their lives.
- prison (noun): a building in which people are legally held as a punishment for crimes they have committed e.g. When people are convicted of a crime, they are often sent to prison.
- sane (adjective): not mentally ill
e.g. All of the prisoners were supposed to be mixed together – men, women, children, the sane, and the insane.
- model (noun): a system or thing used as an example to follow or imitate e.g. There were two different models for the American prison system.
- cell (noun): a small room in which a prisoner is locked up e.g. Prisoners worked together in total silence during the day but had to be locked in their own cells at night.
- solitary confinement (noun): a form of imprisonment in which a prisoner is isolated from other people e.g. Prisoners were supposed to be kept in solitary confinement day and night.

Self-Assessment

Yes

No

I talk about rules, regulations, crime and punishment.

☐
☐

I talk about what is supposed to happen.

☐
☐

I talk about things I had done or things that had happened.

☐
☐

I present my opinion about punishment.

☐
☐

Learning Points

The Past Perfect Tense

You use the Past Perfect tense to identify and talk about an 'earlier past'.

When you are talking about a past event, you can refer to something that happened at an earlier time to that past event by using the Past Perfect tense.

The structure of the Past Perfect is:

Subject + had + past participle

When I arrived at the party, Vanessa had already gone home.

Which event happened first? Vanessa went home.

Which event happened later? I arrived at the party.

You use the Past Perfect tense (not Simple Past) when you want to talk about how long something had continued up to a past moment.

Until recently, detectives had used a limited number of tools to help them solve crimes.

Detectives used a limited number of tools from the past until recently.

Examples:

- Until the 1600s, most serious criminals had been executed by hanging or exiled from their homes to faraway islands.
- Petty offenders and poor people who had debts they could not repay had been sentenced to workhouses.

Learning Points

Simple Past Passive and Modal Verbs in the Passive Voice

You use an active structure when you want the 'doer' of the action to be the subject.
You use a passive structure when you want the 'receive' of the action to be the subject.

You use modal verbs (can, could, may, might, have to) to add meaning to other verbs. They come before the dictionary form (Infinitive without 'to') of the main verb.
Modal verbs can add meaning connected with certainty or obligation.

Active sentence = The prison staff (subject) locked prisoners (object) in their cells at night.
Passive sentence = Prisoners (subject) were locked in their cells at night (by the prison staff).

It is not necessary to mention the object in a passive sentence.

You make the passive form of a verb by using tenses of the verb to be followed by the past participle.

The Simple Past passive form is:

was/were + past participle

The building was built in 1993.

You can add a modal verb before the verb to be.

Subject + modal + To be + past participle

The cost of their imprisonment could be repaid.

Here the sentence now has an additional meaning of possibility, thanks to the modal could.

Examples:

- The system was changed in 1870.
- Prisoners had to be locked in their cells at night.
- The cost of their imprisonment could be repaid.

