

Instructor: Date:

Learner: Regional Branch:

Program: Center:

CONTENT

- Let's Start! • Let's Explore! • Let's Practice! • Extension Activity • Target Words • Learning Points

Let's Start!

You are accused of breaking the law!

Learning Outcome

Identify and describe rules and obligations through a wider range of language and expressions in both work and social contexts.

Ask your partner:

- What do you think is the most serious crime? Why?
- Do you think your country's justice system is fair? Why or why not?

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about rules, regulations, crime and punishment.
- I can talk about what is supposed to happen.
- I can talk about what I was doing or what was happening.

Let's Explore!

Sally decides to blog about the ways of justice. What did she Google?

* To "Google" means to search for something on the internet.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

I was reading the news the other day when I came across an article that talked about a trial by judge. I had never heard of that before. I decided to Google it. While I was reading about it, I thought that it would be a good topic to blog about. Here is what I learned: Trials are supposed to take place in situations when individuals or companies are accused of breaking the law. The crime could be major, such as murder or treason against the government, or a misdemeanor such as petty theft or minor damage to property.

There are two main types of trials: trial by jury and trial by judge. In some countries, there are only judge trials, but in other countries there are both types of trials, depending on the nature of the case. Cases involving misdemeanors are generally tried by judge. Major crimes are generally tried by jury.

In a jury trial, twelve people are supposed to decide whether the accused is guilty or innocent. If guilty, the judge decides on the severity of the punishment, sometimes with input from the jury. Before the trial, the defense and the prosecution are supposed to interview the people on the jury and decide if they are acceptable. They are allowed to reject some potential jurors – those they think will be damaging to their side.

Let's Practice!

What words do you know to talk about crime?

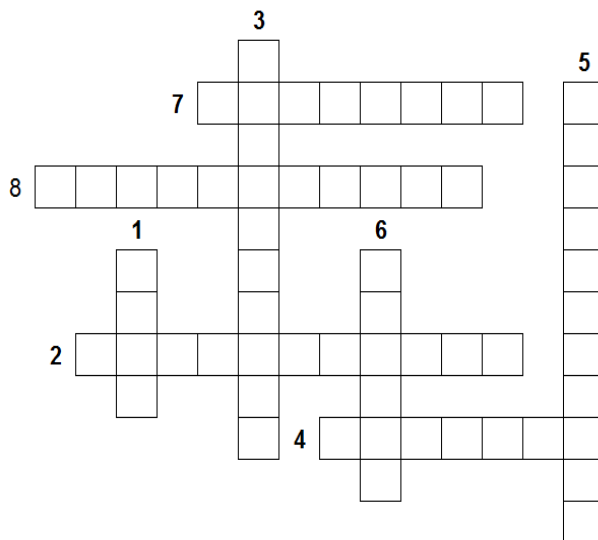

Instructions: Complete the crossword with the hints provided.

Down

1. The j__y decided on the guilt or innocence of a suspect in a court of law.
3. P__ ____t means stealing a small amount of money or goods.
5. A m____r is a less serious offence.
6. The n____e of something refers to the kind or type.

Across

2. The p____n is a team of lawyers who represent the law.
4. The crime of betraying your own country is called t____n.
7. S____y is another word for strictness.
8. To b____ ____w means to do something that is not allowed by law.

Let's Practice!

Sally was blogging about trials.

Instructions: Complete the sentences below using the sentences in the box.

was doing searching / was trying to find / was read, was doing research / she was searching / was reading the news / was reading about it

1. I _____ the other day when I came across an article that talked about a trial by judge.
2. While I _____, I thought that it would be a good topic to blog about.
3. Sally _____ more information about trials.
4. When she _____, she learned something new.
5. She took notes about types of trials while _____ for information.

Extension Activity

Watch a TV show or a movie about the criminal justice system.

Instructions: Complete the following steps. Fill in the Self-Assessment.

- Watch a TV show or movie about the criminal justice system or a trial.
- While you are watching, write down things that you learn or that surprise you about justice.
- Write a summary of the TV show or movie and write sentences about the new or surprising facts you learned.
- In your group, make a short presentation about what you watched and learned.

Self-Assessment

Yes

No

I talk about rules, regulations, crime and punishment.

☐ ☐

I talk about what is supposed to happen.

☐ ☐

I talk about what I was doing or what was happening.

☐ ☐

I deliver a presentation.

☐ ☐

Target Words

- to break the law (expression): to do something that is not allowed by law
e.g. Trials are supposed to take place in situations when individuals or companies are accused of breaking the law.
- treason (noun): the crime of betraying your own country
e.g. The crime could be major, such as murder or treason against the government.
- misdemeanor (noun): a less serious offense
e.g. Minor damage to property is a misdemeanor.
- petty theft (noun): stealing a small amount of money or goods e.g. Petty theft is a misdemeanor.
- jury (noun): a group of people who decide guilt or innocence in a court of law e.g. There are two main types of trials: trial by jury and trial by judge.
- nature (noun): kind; type e.g. There are both types of trials, depending on the nature of the case.
- severity (noun): strictness
e.g. If guilty, the judge decides on the severity of the punishment.
- prosecution (noun): a team of lawyers who represent the law
e.g. Before the trial, the defense and the prosecution are supposed to interview the people on the jury and decide if they are acceptable.

Learning Points

Be Supposed To

You use the structure be supposed to when you want to talk about expectations, obligations or arrangements.

You can use be supposed to to talk about situations in the past, present or future.

The structure is:

Subject + To be + supposed to + verb

Twelve people are supposed to decide whether the accused is guilty or innocent.

*Pronunciation tip:

When you say be supposed to, you link the /d/ and /t/ sounds together.

Like this:

Be suppose_to

Examples:

- Before the trial, the defense and the prosecution are supposed to interview the people on the jury and decide if they are acceptable.
- Trials are supposed to take place in situations when individuals or companies are accused of breaking the law.

Learning Points

The Past Continuous Tense

You use the Past Continuous tense to talk about an action that was happening at a time before now.

You can use the Past Continuous to:

- to describe the background in a story written in the past tense

For example:

The children were laughing and the birds were singing in the park. A woman was looking for her phone, which she had dropped somewhere ...

- to describe an action that was interrupted by another event or action

For example:

I was reading the news the other day when I came across an article that talked about a trial by judge.

The form of the Past Continuous is:

Subject + was/were + verb-ing

Examples:

- While I was reading about it, I thought that it would be a good topic to blog about.
- I was reading the news the other day when I came across an article that talked about a trial by judge.

